ALBURG.

For sometime it has been felt that omething should be done in the comnunity for the "teen-age" boy and that an organization of an inter-denominational character should be formed. Such an organization was recently brought into being. A constitution and by-laws have been drawn up. True manhood and good citizenship are one of the objects hoped to attain as the result of military physical training, healthful sport and instruction along the lines of time living. The boys who are displaying much enthuslasm have decided to call their organization "The Alburg Guards." They meet every Saturday afternoon for drill under the command of their captain, H. Rice. The boys are making great progress in their training and in their new uniforms will present a smart military appearance. A baseball team also has been formed in connection with the guards and Douglas Dean has been selected as captain.
